With knowledge and education comes great power, and this can be extremely dangerous if it falls into the hands of those who are self-serving. How does Orwell display this issue in Animal Farm?

Who, in the novel, is educated?

Who are the uneducated?

How are they in a dangerous position?

How are the pigs self-serving?

Quotations